Helping Communities Rebound

Helping communities rebound from a traumatic event or natural disaster requires a multi-level and cross sector effort. There are immediate community needs to be met—such as trauma support, food, water, and shelter—and long-term needs to support recovery and development. In order to deploy corporate resources quickly and efficiently, corporate citizenship professionals must partner internally and externally to make the best possible use of all available resources, from corporate giving and volunteering to security, logistics, and supply chain management.
